Record Number Graduate at December Commencement

Saturday's 2010 winter commencement marked the the largest December graduation class on record. Six hundred and five Eagles packed McDougald-McLendon Gymnasium; 375 undergraduate and 230 graduate and professional degrees were awarded.

U.S. Rep. and NCCU graduate G.K. Butterfield gave the commencement speech. Butterfield, who was recently reelected to a fourth term in North Carolina's First Congressional District, earned undergraduate and law degrees from NCCU.

Butterfield recalled that Martin Luther King Jr. had spoken at NCCU just before he arrived as a student. "You were part of his vision. This institution was part of his vision. The election of black elected officials was his vision." But Butterfield didn't just wax nostalgic. He insisted that students need to be aware of the challenges facing the world.

"You must understand that there are six billion people in the world. One half of them live on less than $2 per day," he said. "In this country, 36 million people live in poverty. One out of five children live in poverty. You cannot ignore humanity, and as you leave this place, you cannot ignore the world."

Students said they were impressed with Butterfield's commencement speech. "Butterfield related to us. He made it about us," said Jamaka Gooding, a political science graduate who plans to earn a master's degree in legal studies.

"A lot of things Butterfield said stood out to me, especially when he said to leave the things you do in God's hands," said Anthony Johnson, a theater graduate who plans to pursue a master's degree in technical theater.

Chancellor Charlie Nelms told the stories of three graduates who have overcome trials and tribulations to make it to this point, including former 2009-10 Campus Echo editor-in-chief Carlton Koonce, Caroline Njogu, a recipient of an Albert Schweitzer Fellowship, and Gary Bradley Hodges, a summa cum laude graduate in business management and administration.

Believe it or not, your day has arrived. It's unbelievable, at least for me.

Yesterday you were screaming in the chorus, "Genesis, Genesis, Genesis" or "Melodies from Heaven, rain down on me, rain down on me." Yesterday you were stomping your feet, clapping your hands, and rolling your eyes, while yelling, "My team is Red Hot, My Team is Red Hot, My Team is RED (red) HOT (hot)." Yesterday you were only 13 at the gym running on the treadmill and eating Doritos while watching B.E.T. Yesterday we were running to basketball practice track practice and swimming lessons. Our daily routines and schedules seemed to never come to an end. I look back now and see how precious those years have been.

When you were born, all my mother could say was your eyes were as big as silver dollars. You entered this world with eyes wide open. You've always received each day with sparkles in your eyes. Now you need to take that optimism, that happiness, that light that shines around you to conquer the world. So, get fired up! But always remember where you came from and the values that you have been taught.

I am so proud of you and all of your accomplishments.
May the Lord bless you and guide you in all that you do, and may your dreams come true!

I am always here for you.
I love you,
Mom

"Graduation day is tough for adults. They go to the ceremony as parents. They come home as contemporaries. After twenty-two years of child-raising, they are unemployed." ~Erma Bombeck

Congratulations to the Class of 2010!

Genevieve Nashell Hyman

What a joy it has been watching you grow to a mature young woman.
You have set an example for every youngster in our family to follow.
God has anointed you tremendously and what a blessing to graduate debt free!
Your loving parents and brother
